

Privacy statement

PRIVERA AG (hereinafter referred to as "PRIVERA") is committed to protecting your data and your privacy. Technical and organisational measures ensure compliance with the statutory regulations relating to data protection. The explanation below describes how the data that is collected, processed and used during your visit to our web pages is handled.

By accessing the PRIVERA web pages, you agree to this privacy statement.

PRIVERA may update its privacy statement at any time, which is why we recommend that you review this on a regular basis. The date of the last update can be found at the end of this statement.

This privacy statement does not apply to web pages that are operated or controlled by third parties and not connected with PRIVERA. Our web pages may contain links to such 'third-party web pages'. For this reason, we kindly ask you to observe the respective privacy statements of third-party web pages as these lie beyond the scope of PRIVERA's monitoring and are therefore not our responsibility. It is also up to the visitor to decide whether any personal information is left on PRIVERA's web pages. Such information includes the visitor's name, email address, postal address, etc. All visitor data will be treated confidentially and will not be passed on to third parties.

Electronic contact

We should like to point out to you that the transmission of unencrypted information via email is neither secure nor suitable for exchanging personal data or any other confidential information.

If you provide personal information by email without employing suitable safeguards, you should be aware that potentially unauthorised third parties may access this information and, as a result, collect, use or even tamper with the data without your consent. In addition, any personal data transmitted via email may also be sent abroad, even though the sender and the recipient are based in Switzerland. You must therefore expect your information to also be transmitted to a country that has a less stringent degree of data protection than Switzerland.

If, in spite of this knowledge, you still contact us via unencrypted email and ask us questions, we assume that you explicitly wish to utilise this manner of communication with us. In such instances, you are providing consent for us to also reply to you or send you the information requested using unencrypted email.

Information

If you have any questions regarding the processing of your personal data by PRIVERA, we kindly ask that you send your written request to the following address:
